It’s a New Year and time, once again, to reflect on the past 12 months and make our resolutions. I’m not sure why we wait until the New Year to make these plans, but, for me, in 2017, I intend on being constantly mindful of ways to improve my life and the lives of those around me. And what a better place to do it than the beautiful Conejo Valley.

A lot of people ask me how the magazine is doing in our second, full-year of publication and I always tell them the same thing. We’re meeting our goal.

From day one, we wanted to provide our community with a one-stop source, where people could find out what was happening in and around the Conejo and keep themselves more active. We also saw it as a tool for organizations to plan their future events by making sure they pick dates that don’t conflict with other scheduled events that might attract a similar audience.

So, gathering from the hundreds of the positive e-mails we have received, the magazine is doing quite well. It’s truly a gift to our community that we hope everyone enjoys and uses to make their lives better, taking full advantage of all the amazing things going on in our area.

The advertisers in our magazine share this view and we are forever grateful to them for helping make Conejo365 a reality. These are wonderful businesses run by wonderful people; your neighbors!

The biggest surprise for us last year was the growth of our e-mail subscribers and the ever-increasing number of people posting events on their own through our website. Didn’t you know you could post any event through our website at www.conejo365.com? We encourage it.

When you put your information on our website, it not only gives your event exposure to visitors to our website, but it’s also sent out to thousands of people locally in our weekly e-mail blast called “Here’s what’s happening this weekend in the Conejo!” Please keep your events coming….the more the merrier, the more unique the better.

Stay in touch! Hope to see some of you around town this New Year!

Mike Corridori

The Nature of Jungles

Cal Lutheran University, William Rolland Gallery of Fine Art, 60 W. Olsen Rd., Thousand Oaks

When Rousseau and Gauguin painted images of enticing beaches and lush jungles, the likes of which had never been seen by most European viewers, the scenes were symbolic of the exotic and of nature untouched by humans. Today, with so much of the globe explored or in use for agriculture, can jungles continue to represent uncharted places? This exhibit compares contemporary perspectives on jungles as well as forests from around the world, and even looks beyond humid climates to the concrete jungles in urban environments. Admission is free.

Artists and Speaker Series – Painting Demonstrations With Rebecca Campbell
Cal Lutheran University, Kwan Fong Gallery in the Silland Humanities Center, 60 W. Olsen Rd., Thousand Oaks
Rebecca Campbell will demonstrate portrait painting amid her exhibit “You Are Here.” Campbell makes each painting with the same dimensions, using paper that she primes with a custom pink acrylic paint. She then employs a limited palette of black, white and gray to build the portrait. Although she approaches each work with identical parameters, Campbell imbues every portrait with a singular sense of identity, capturing the sitter’s strengths and vulnerabilities alike with bold and gestural brushstrokes. Beyond subject matter, the works are a celebration of painting itself and the quality of imagery that can only be brought forth with paint and brush.
